January 28, 2022 7 1 In the first months after the sinking of the Normandy, he felt as if he had returned to his hometown after years of absence. He recognized and did not recognize the streets. He had never been to the area, yet he seemed to have known it for years. He wandered the streets and lanes he had walked in as a child and thought about the city as it had been many, many years ago. He looked with surprise at unfamiliar buildings and marveled at how the architecture had changed in such a short time.
