As always, this newsletter can only contain current news. It is time again to test the 2015 Audi R8 V10 Plus Nurburgring. Today is the third test, and this time, the team prepared more cool machinery. For the first time, the test was run with the standard internal exhaust concept. The team had almost the same equipment as the one from the last video, including more seats, more materials and a watch. We will show you a nice video of the test, but before that, have a look at the preview of the video. 2015 Audi R8 V10 Plus Nurburgring Test 2 The video starts with the introduction to the test, including details of the new coupe. The next part is the drivers' briefing. From this point, we see more of the equipment. After the drivers' briefing, the test starts. It begins with a cool video, following the new Audi R8 V10 Plus Nurburgring test. The actual video is shown, including beautiful shots of the test. Another part is the view from the cockpit. On the table we see some information, and on the floor a number of tools and materials needed for the test. There is also some information on the track in this video. In the last part of the test, we see the interview with the drivers. A few short words before the actual test begin, including some information about the test. We start the actual test, including the start of the car, which is not on a tow. The team immediately starts the engine, and we see the car start to move forward. The steering wheel is adjusted to the right position. The first part of the track is driven, and it is followed by a cool video of the rest of the track. We then see the interview with the drivers.
